

Clear and warmer tonight and tomorrow.

The Washington Times

LAST EDITION

NUMBER 4260.

WASHINGTON, SATURDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 17, 1906.

PRICE ONE CENT.

ALICE LEE ROOSEVELT, WHITE HOUSE BRIDE OF REPRESENTATIVE NICHOLAS LONGWORTH

STREETS CROWDED BY PEOPLE EAGER TO VIEW BRIDE

White House Wedding
Attracts Multitude of Sightseers.

DEEP INTEREST SHOWN

Curious Folk Assemble Long Before the Hour Set for the Ceremony.

In Washington-at-large today the tribute of interest, speculation and contagious good feeling was paid to the happy pair at the White House. On the streets the crowds gravitated toward the White House, wondering eyes peering up avenues and streets, as if expecting to see some part of the wedding procession of guests flash past in gorgeous equipages. From the windows of the houses around the charmed territory known as Dupont Circle envious eyes watched the fortunate guests go toward the Executive Mansion.

Three hours before noon, squads of policemen passed up Pennsylvania avenue, signs that the nation would protect its bride from all intrusion and disturbance. On the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street early this morning, an aged couple stood and watched the streets bathed in sunshine.

"Bride That Sun Shines On."
"Happy the bride that the sun shines on," said the old lady, and this was the burden of all the sayings on the street today. It came from the lips of men, women, and children. It grew monotonous, but, could the White House bride have heard the gay, spontaneous way in which it was said, she would have appreciated the fact that the people of Washington and the surrounding country were genuinely glad that the auspices of her marriage were the best.

People felt a curiosity which they sought to check as being intrusive, a desire to see which they thought made them appear as too forward, and a longing to be as near as possible to the White House, which they suspected might put them in the light of "peeps" from the country, all eyes and open mouth. This much was evident, but it was also more evident that the curiosity was the strongest force of all.

White House the Mecca.
The sightseers, the people in town from neighboring cities and villages, and many of the residents walked, and many of the residents walked, up Pennsylvania avenue, down Connecticut avenue, up F street, down Sixteenth street—but all went toward the White House.

In front of the hotels, some minutes before the time came for departure for the White House, liveried footmen loitered in getting carriages into line for the visiting guests. In the lobbies the gleam and sheen of women's costumes such as have never before been seen in the National Capital formed a riot of color, an elegant sparkle of tasteful wealth. Men, known throughout the country as the head and front of all that is best in society and business and politics, led their ladies to the carriages.

A crack of the whip, a plunge of the horses, a whirl of wheels and the laughing parties were off for the White House. In front of the stateliest mansions in the northwest part of the city similar scenes were enacted. The who city was astir and conscious of unusual events, for the hon. approached when the President's daughter was to be married.

Of humorous scenes on the streets there was a plenty. People, as the magic hour of high noon approached, were more hurried in their attempts to get nearer the White House.

"How true it is," said one old gentleman, looking across from New York avenue toward the Executive Mansion, "that there is a divinity which doth hedge about a king. We say the President is no more than anybody else, but, nevertheless, the whole nation is stirred with unusual interest today, because the President's daughter is being married."

People flocked F street, and many few vehicles on the roadway. There were persons stood on the asphalt. Somebody raised a warning cry that a carriage was coming. The pedestrians surged back to the sidewalk, and there hurried past an elegant equipage, drawn by a pair of magnificent bays. Some one in the crowd said:

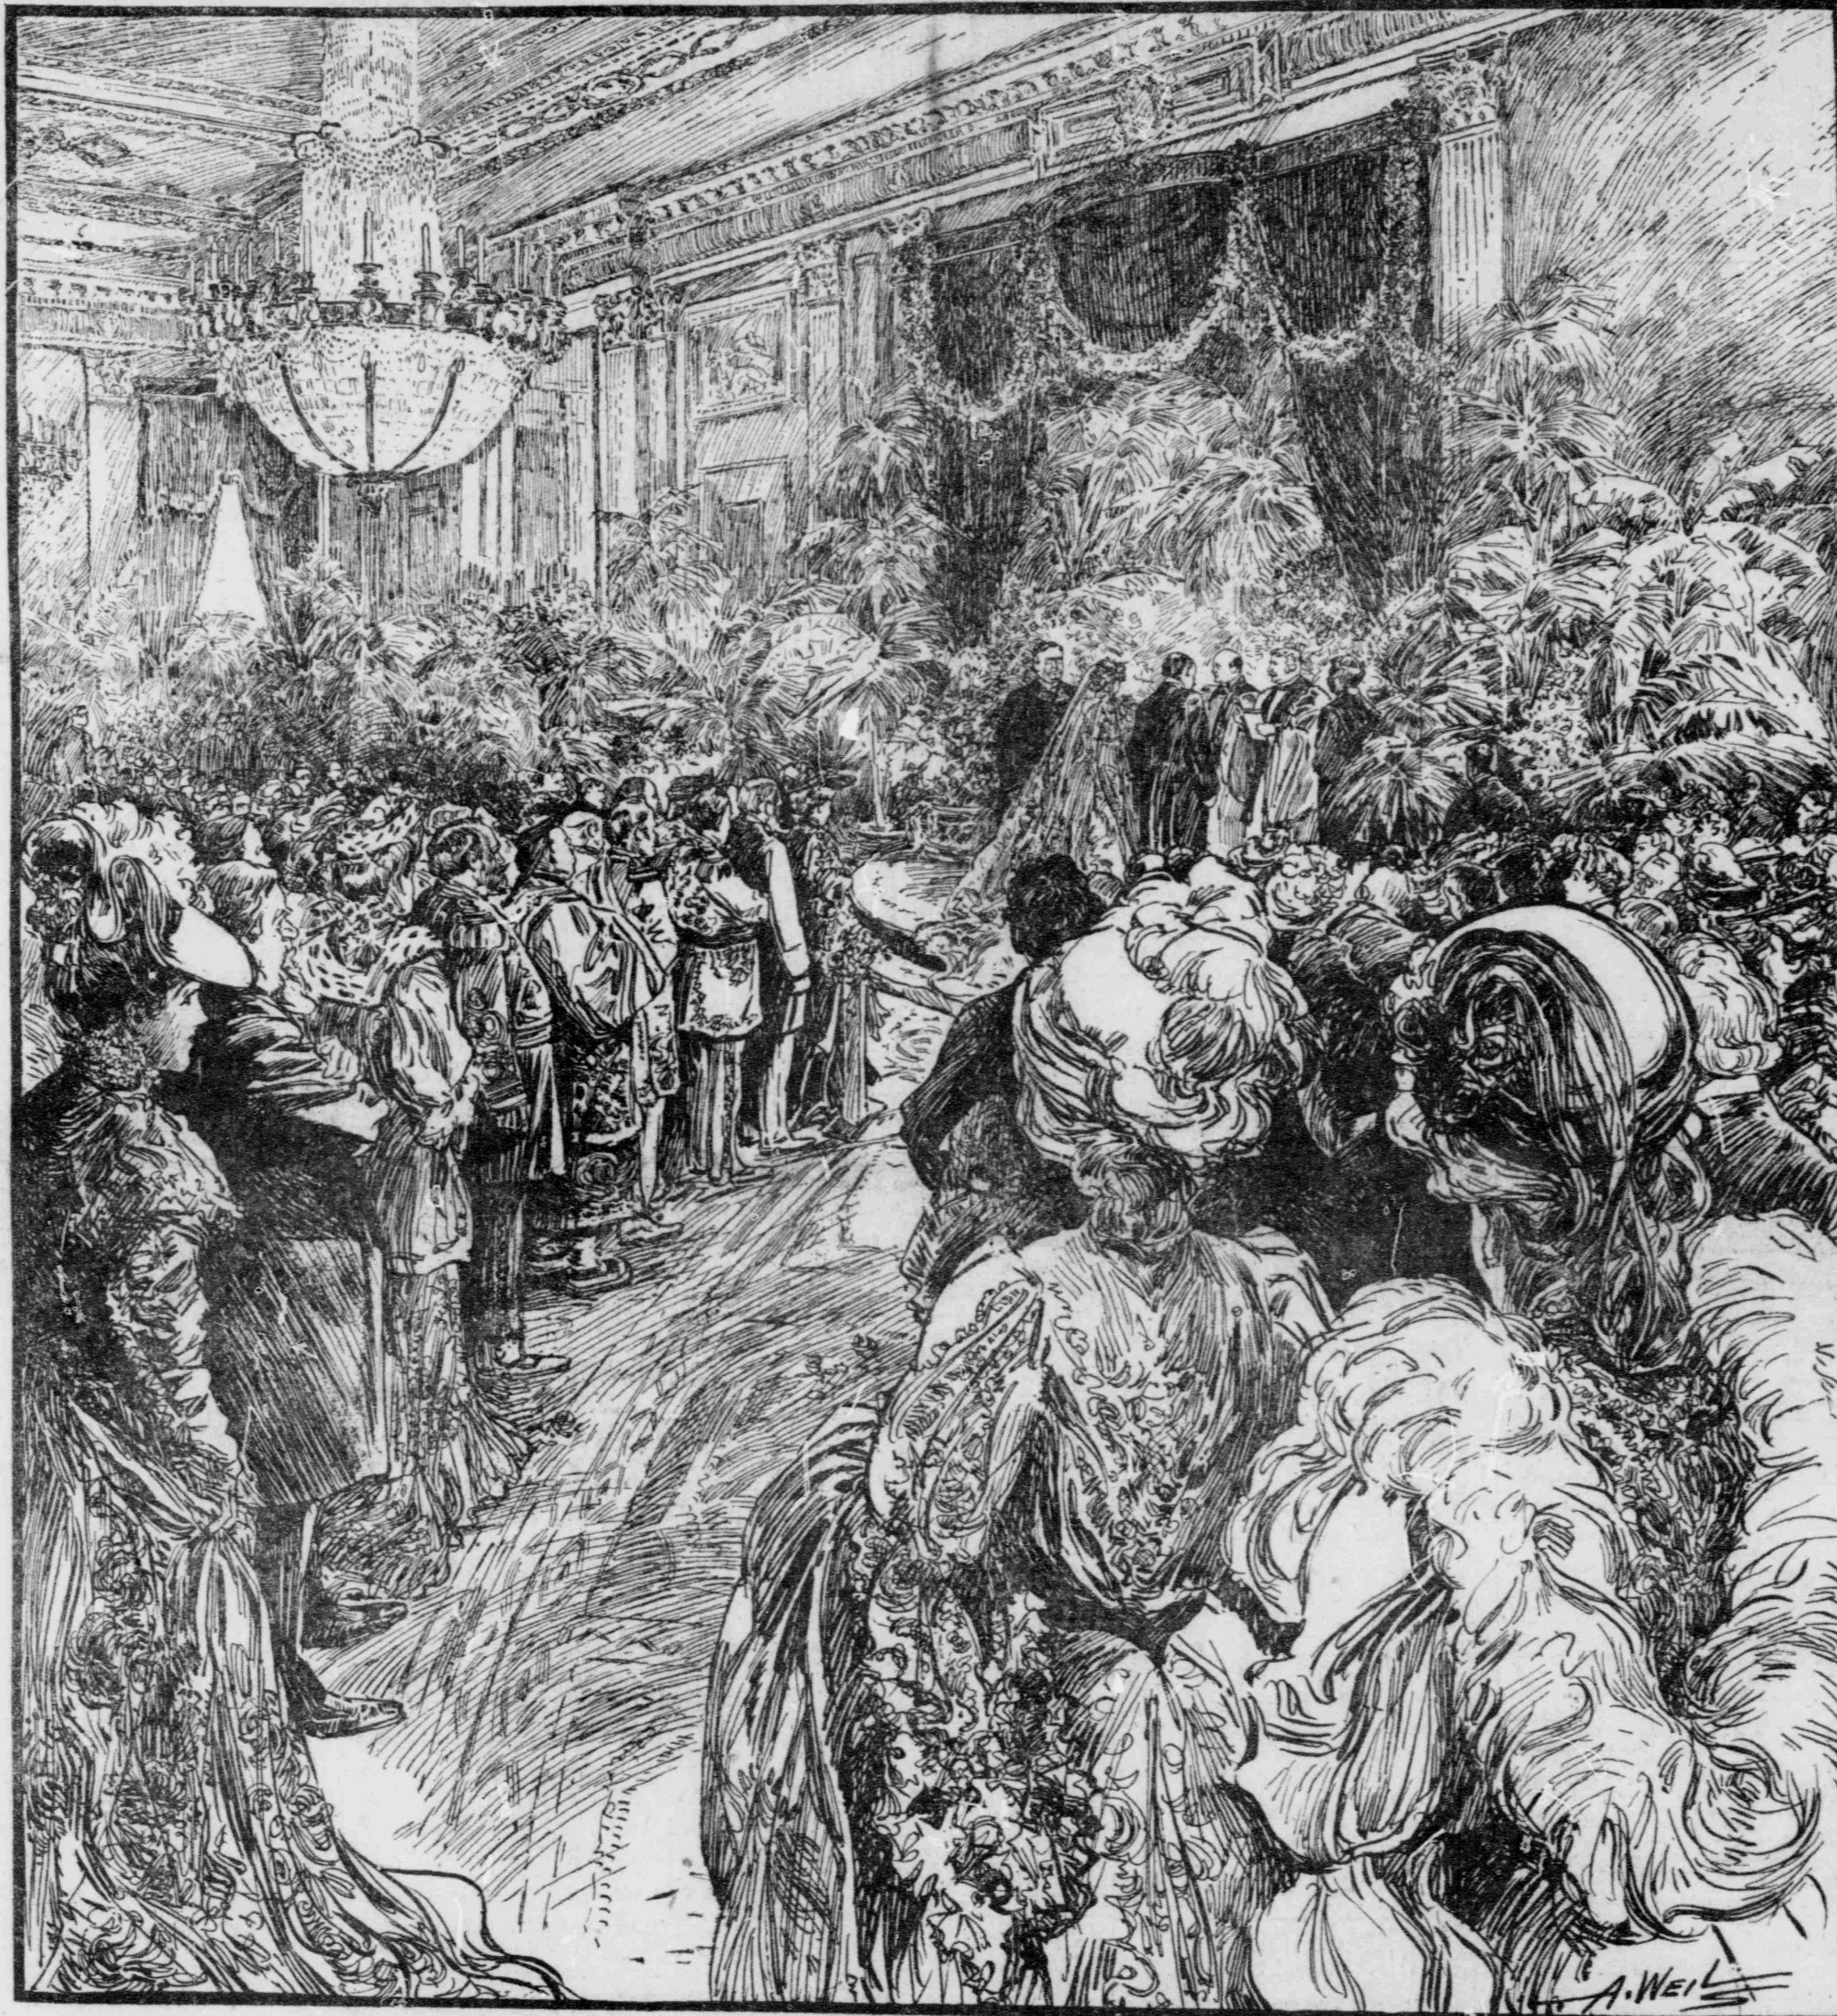

"There goes Mrs. Roosevelt. She was not invited to the wedding today."

The carriage drew up with a jolt and a jar in front of a store a few feet further on, and the lady from Virginia gave orders to a much belated footman as to certain things she wanted purchased.

"Why are there so many people on the street today, John?" she asked the funky.

The footman explained he thought it was because of the wedding at the White House.

"Dear me!" she said, with a fine show of scorn. "Is there a wedding at this time?" "How queer that people should be interested in it." Her feminine mind was apparently satisfied with its show of indifference to the prime happening in the country today.

SCENE AT THE MOMENT WHEN BISHOP SATTERLEE SAID: "I PRONOUNCE THEE MAN AND WIFE."

Grave and dignified representatives of the thrones of the world, and delicately, brilliantly dressed women, stood massed on either side of a narrow lane marked with white ribbon, watching the little group on the platform in the middle of a room-wide bank of greens, including the bride in her dazzling veil, the soberly dressed groom, the two clergymen in their black and white vestments, and the President of the United States.

THE WEATHER REPORT.

The weather will continue fair tonight and Sunday in the East and South, except in Ohio, where there will be local snows tonight or Sunday. Temperatures will rise.

THE SUN.
Sun sets today..... 5:39
Sun rises tomorrow..... 6:49
TIDE TABLE.
High tide today..... 2:10 p. m.
Low tide today..... 8:50 p. m.
High tide tomorrow, 2:18 a. m., 3:56 p. m.
Low tide tomorrow, 9:38 a. m., 11:00 p. m.

The daily average net paid circulation of The Washington Times exceeds that of any other Washington paper by thousands of copies.

Yesterday's net circulation was 38,591

LIST OF GUESTS WHO THRONED EAST ROOM

The East Room has always been notable for its brilliant gatherings, used as it is for all state entertainments. Heading the Diplomatic Corps was the Austrian Ambassador and Baroness Hengelmüller, and following came the French Ambassador and Madame Jusserand, the German Ambassador and Baroness von Sternburg, the British Ambassador and Lady Darnley, the Brazilian Ambassador and Madame Nabuco, the Russian Ambassador and Baroness Rosen, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Casasus, the Italian Minister and Signor Montagna, charge d'affaires for Italy, the Swedish Minister, the Danish Minister, the Haitian Minister and Madame Leger, the Costa Rican Minister and Senora Calvo, the Nicaraguan Minister, and Mr. Hiocki, charge d'affaires for Japan.

Diplomats in Line.
Then came the Belgian Minister and Baroness Moncheur, the minister from Siam, the Chilean Minister and Senora de Walker-Martinez, the minister from Portugal, the Minister from Cuba and Senora de Quesada, Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng, the Chinese minister; the minister from Uruguay, the minister from the Netherlands, the Minister from Bolivia and Senora de Calderon, Minister from Panama and Senora de Obaldia, the minister from Guatemala, the minister from Persia, the minister from Switzerland, the Minister from Argentine Republic and Senora de Pardo, the minister from Colombia, the Minister from Peru and Madame de Pardo, the minister from Turkey, Senor Castor, charge d'affaires for Spain; the Minister from Ecuador and Senora de Plaza, the minister from the Dominican Republic, the Charge d'Affaires from Venezuela and Senora de Veloz, the Charge d'Affaires for Norway and Madame Haug.

Then the Cabinet Officers.
Heading the list of Cabinet officers was the Secretary of State and Mrs. Root, followed by the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Shaw, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Taft, Attorney General Moody, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Cortelyou, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Bonaparte, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Hitchcock, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Metcalf. The party who accompanied Secretary Taft on the Manchuria to the Philippine Islands, the entire Ohio delegation in Congress, almost the entire New York delegation in Congress, and the following members of the President's family: Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Miss Corinne Douglas Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robinson, Kenneth W. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, Miss Christine Roosevelt, Miss Dorothy Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin V. Roosevelt, Miss Gladys Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Hilborne Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. West Roosevelt, Miss Jean Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Roosevelt, Miss Katherine Roosevelt, Miss Loraine Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Roosevelt, Miss Olga Roosevelt, Miss Fanny Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. Emilen Roosevelt, and Mrs. E. Emilen Roosevelt.

Longworth's Relatives.
Among Mr. Longworth's relatives were his mother, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, sr., his sister, the Countess de Chambrun, Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Charles Anderson, Buckner Anderson Clough Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. David C. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson, the Misses Anderson, Mrs. George Anderson, Mrs. Larz Anderson and sons, of Ohio, Miss Rebecca Anderson, Mrs. Nicholas Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Rachel Anderson and family, of Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. William Pope, of derson, Mr. Buckner Wallingford, and Viscount de Chambrun. Other prominent guests from out of town were Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. S. Burden, E. A. Burden, Col. William C. Church, Capt. Spencer Cosby Senator and Mrs. Murray Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fulton Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goellet, Mr. and Mrs. Fleischmann, Mr. and Mrs. Munroe, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Harlan, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, Garret A. Hobart, Jr., Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Miller, Miss Beatrice Mills, of New York, and Miss Gladys Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Miss Cynthia Roche, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar S. Straus, Capt. J. K. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Vreeland, Miss Annie Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilison, H. DeForest Weeks, Frederick Winthrop, Arthur H. Woods of Croton, Henry E. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Woods, Miss Cornelia Wolcott.

Washington People There.
Among the prominent Washington people present were Senator and Mrs. Elkins, Miss Elkins, Senator and Mrs. Knox, Senator Frank B. Brandegee, Col. and Mrs. Charles S. Bromwell, Miss Josephine Beardman, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, Representative and Mrs. John Dailzell, Mr. and Mrs. William Concordia Eastie, Mr. H. Townsend, Miss Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. George Howard.

We Have Anything.
Merchants' Transfer & Storage Co.—Adv.

BRILLIANT THROG VIEWS CEREMONY IN DEEP SILENCE

Bride a Vision of Loveliness as She Enters East Room.

SCENE OF GAY BEAUTY

Dignitaries of Many Lands and America's Greatest Notables.

THE BRIDE'S GOWN

White satin, made princess; waist trimmed with point lace; elbow sleeves and no collar; court train of silver brocade; Tulle veil, caught with orange blossoms.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Dress

Heavy brocade, cream colored, with blue and brown figures, with golden threads. Made princess, with yoke of brown chiffon, embroidered in blue and gold. Skirt has panels of embroidered chiffon, and long train of material.

Never in the history of the old White House has there been a scene so brilliant and significant as today. When Miss Alice Lee Roosevelt, daughter of the President, became the bride of Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio.

For weeks, the whole country has been looking forward to this event, and foreign nations have watched with interest the approach of Miss Roosevelt's wedding. For to them, as to America, it meant the passing of the most celebrated belle the White House has ever known.

Today was an ideal wedding day for any girl. But for one who has endeared herself to millions of people and to whom all the good things in the world have manifestly come at her bidding, the sun could not help shining, and the whole world seemed to be glad.

Never Had Equal.

State receptions of almost every character have been held in the White House for many years, but the significance of all of them was today eclipsed by the wedding of Miss Roosevelt. Foreign diplomats, the highest officials in the service of this country, and members of the most exclusive social set at the Capital, made up the guest list today.

Although the hour of the ceremony called for conventional afternoon dress, the women guests displayed a taste in selecting their gowns that alone would have made the scene a brilliant picture. About the East Room and corridor, the corps of about 1,000 guests, in full uniform, and just inside the main entrance, the Marine Band, in their full dress uniforms of brilliant red and gold, was stationed amid a bower of palms and flowers.

Guests Seated Rapidly.

The doors of the White House were opened at 11:15, but it was not until almost a half hour later that the guests began to arrive. When they did come, it took all the energies of the eight ushers of the East room. This was done with remarkable rapidity and system, which made manifest that each little detail in the seating of guests had been thoroughly understood before the hour for the wedding.

There was a stream of guests through both entrances. Special guests were admitted through the main door of the White House and others who held cards for the east entrance came through the lower corridor and staircase.

In East Room.

Promptly at 11:15 o'clock the guests, who had long been waiting, were admitted to the East room, where the ceremony took place. The great throng surged about the rope of white satin, which ran from the large double doors into the East room, and directly opposite the platform, to a point within ten feet of where the bride stood, and then formed a square inclosure for the members of the families.

The Cabinet members and their wives, foreign emissaries and their wives, and members of the Supreme Court with their wives, along with the relatives of the bride and the bridegroom, were given the places nearest the altar.

Mrs. Roosevelt Enters.

At five minutes before 12 o'clock, Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her younger children, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Kermit Roosevelt, Archibald Roosevelt, and Quentin Roosevelt, came down the state stairway and entered the East room.

Baltimore and Return, $1.25.
Via Pennsylvania railroad, every Saturday and Sunday. All trains except "Congressional Limited."—Adv.